COVER

As our production manager very rightly observed, the cover shot does have a lot of the aspects of a dog's breakfast but, in my defence, it really is a wonderful main course for our crops. It's sustainable, it's organic and it's found in our native bushland settings. It's Actinobacteria – they contribute to global carbon cycling by helping to decompose soil nutrients; they increase plant productivity; and, they regulate climate support ecosystems. See article page 14.
